REBNY Hosts Commercial Management Leadership Awards

The Real Estate Board of New York (REBNY) held its annual Commercial Management Leadership Breakfast at the New York Hilton, where honorees were awarded in eight categories, including four categories that are new this year: Porter of the Year, Security Professional of the Year, Engineer of the Year and the Rising Star of the Year Award.

A record of 760 people turned out to see their commercial managers and colleagues receive their awards, including honorees and members from unions Local 94 and 32BJ. Bill Rudin, CEO of Rudin Management and chairman of the Association for a Better New York, gave the Keynote Speech.

"It is always a pleasure and an honor to recognize hardworking people in the industry to let them know their diligence and dedication is admired and deserves to be rewarded," said Steven Spinola, REBNY president. "With the addition of four new awards this year, we were able to credit our colleagues across the spectrum of those who make the buildings in this city run on a daily basis."

Terry Whalen, president of First New York Partners, was named the Edward A. Riguardi Commercial Management Executive of the Year. The John M. Griffin Community Service Award went to Jeff Caimi, property manager, Paramount Group. And the honor of On-Site Manager of the Year was awarded to Cindy Boyea, property manager, Paramount Group.
